The House and Senate Committees on Judiciary participated in a tour of the Department of Public Safety Standards and Training facilities. The tour included a brief overview of the training that law enforcement officers undergo. The Committees saw a mock town where officers learn to interact in a variety of situations. Tour participants were invited to engage in hands-on activities, such as police encounter simulators and obstacle course. The group toured the indoor gun-range and driving course. Throughout the tour, participants interacted with law enforcement officials and learned about effort to improve policing practices and community interactions.
