Need for the Temporary Rule(s): The 2010 Oregon Structural Specialty Code, Section 2308.9.3.2 specifies that alternate braced wall panels adjacent to doors and window openings have tie-down devices rated at 4,200 pounds for uplift. It was recently pointed out to the Division that tie-down devices for this application are not able to meet the 4,200 pound requirement. In order to ensure that structural integrity is maintained, this section of the code must be amended.

Documents Relied Upon, and where they are available: Administrative rules are available on the Building Codes Division website at www.bcd.oregon.gov or from the Division's Rules Coordinator at 1535 Edgewater Street NW, Salem, Oregon. Minutes of the May 4, 2011 Building Codes Structures Board meeting are available from the Division.

Justification of Temporary Rule(s): This rule is necessary because the type of tie-down device specified in the 2010 Oregon Structural Specialty Code, Section 2308.9.3.2 are not available. In order to ensure that alternate braced wall panels adjacent to door and window openings comply, the code must be amended to adjust the panel size to account for changes made to tie-down devices.
