Kathy -

Here are three reports that are "County" oriented produced by Economic Development.

The Successful Business Case report is a Foxbase report that we could create in a text-type file.

The Oregon Lottery Quarterly Report is a Dbase report that also could be created in a text-type file.

The Community Development
Programs report is in Word Perfect 4.2.

If you want to pursue getting these on floppy disk, call me at 373-1200.

Carrying the Comeback to every corner of Oregon....

Bringing Economic Development To Rural Oregon

The Challenge... The Goal

In January, 1987, the immediate priority facing the state was economic recovery... bringing Oregon back from the depths of the last recession. A fundamental premise of this mission was that for the "Oregon Comeback" to be meaningful, it would have to reach every corner of Oregon. For it to be successful, it would have to build on existing regional strengths and assets and add recession-proofing diversity to local industrial mixes.

The Oregon Economic Development Department has been a lead agency in carrying out the "Oregon Comeback." After a sweeping reorganization to create a unified structure that effectively coordinated the major state and federal programs aimed at economic development—business development and business finance, community development, international trade, job training, ports, and tourism—the OEDD was ready to embark on its task with a renewed sense of internal partnership, purpose and a stronger-than-ever lottery-funded arsenal.

But for the "Comeback" to come true, it would take more than the OEDD to get the job done. It would require state agencies such as OEDD, the Department of Environmental Quality, Department of Transportation and Department of Insurance and Finance to work together as a single team to overcome the many obstacles facing business location or expansion. More than that, it would take a new level of partnership between state and local government and the private sector if Oregon's various regions were to take charge of their own economic destinies and garner the greatest results from limited resources. Above all, Oregon counties would have to be partners instead of competitors.

Bayliner's $5 million boat manufacturing plant in Roseburg is one of the hundreds of new investments which have taken place in Oregon since 1987. Projects such as this are bringing much needed economic diversity to rural Oregon.

Oregon's economy made important headway in 1987 and 1988 as a resurgent, confident economy expanded by 94,000 jobs. Ongoing tracking predicts 1989 will continue the upward trend. Just as impressive are the recent figures on investment in the state: $800 million in completed or announced investments involving the Oregon Economic Development Department since July 1987, with another $700 million in investments pending permits for two pulp mills. This unprecedented level of activity is projected to create over 9,400 new jobs and save over 2,600 existing jobs when these 206 projects reach fruition.

But has "the other Oregon," the one outside the Portland metropolitan area and the Willamette Valley, seen its share of this phenomenal rebound as Oregon emerges as a national leader in non-agricultural job growth? What are some of the economic development programs that now enable Oregon to capitalize on opportunities when they present themselves or create them when they don't? And what plans are there to build on this momentum and ensure continued success for all of Oregon in a dynamic and changing global economy?
